A Commitment to Diversity through Transformative Inclusion
CCAC is an important gateway to higher education for members of the Pittsburgh community. Boasting one of the most diverse student populations of any institution of higher education in Pittsburgh, CCAC has long been committed to fostering a culture where diversity, equity and inclusion are institutional priorities. The college believes that promoting diversity and inclusion is everyone’s responsibility. Through education, training and outreach, the college endeavors to promote a culture where varying perspectives are welcomed and valued.

Central to CCAC’s diversity efforts is the Office of Institutional Diversity & Inclusion (OIDI), which coordinates the college’s inclusion initiatives and oversees the college’s cultural competency training and diversity programming. In a collaborative effort to promote diversity and inclusion in the region, the OIDI partners with several community organizations such as the Greater Pittsburgh Higher Education Diversity Consortium and the YWCA’s Center for Racial and Gender Equity.

During the 2018–2019 academic year, OIDI staff presented to more than 1,140 people, both internally and externally, serving as content area experts on diversity and inclusion in the higher education setting. Specific subjects included cultural competency; workplace diversity; Title IX; and civil rights and responsibilities for students, administrators, faculty, staff, and community partners and members.
